OPEN SPACE: Nearly 80% of the existing preserved open space in Carlsbad is “natural open space,” large undeveloped areas with nature trails and areas for sensitive plants and animals. Carlsbad is the only North County city with an approved Habitat Management Plan, which is a 50-year, comprehensive biological approach to preserving natural land for plant and animal species.

Calavera Hills Community Park is on the site of the former Calavera School, one of Carlsbad’s earliest schools, built in 1897. The area is tied to the historic Calavera Schoolhouse, with a community garden established in 2014 honoring the site’s legacy, while modern improvements continue to enhance its accessibility. The park is a 21-acre site, serves as a hub for recreation, featuring a community center, ball fields, and playgrounds.
