

Dear Future Homeowner,

When we set out to find the perfect home away from home, it was hard to imagine that we'd find a place as beautiful and peaceful as our cabin. Coming from the hustle and bustle of the suburbs, we wanted a place that felt relaxing and encompassed everything that we were hoping for, and the cabin has been exactly that.

Stepping into the cabin is always such an immersive experience when you're enveloped in an abundance of trees. Hearing the birds sing, watching squirrels play, listening to the trees sway in the wind, and the relaxing sound of the creek in the back are all such magical moments our family has encountered. The big windows that span from the ceiling to the floor boast beautiful views of the trees and allow plenty of light to come in. It's always such a calming feeling to have a cup of coffee in the morning while sitting on the deck, and being in the midst of the forest that is not only ideal for privacy but also helps keep the inside cool during the warmer months.

In the winter season, our beagle loves to run around the fresh snow, and we've had our fair share of family snow fights, sledding, and building snowmen. Inside, the wood stove does a great job warming the cabin and keeping it cozy, as we watch movies, observe the snowflakes that fall, and roast sweet potatoes in the fire. The big open space was perfect for our family, and it allowed us all to gather and cook in a communal setting while still being able to engage in laughter, fun, and games in the living room.

The cabin sits in a perfect location to engage in plenty of outdoor activities, in the surrounding areas, such as hunting, camping, swimming in the rivers and lakes, and hiking. After all of that activity outside, coming home to a comforting home is the best feeling.

Although the initial incline may seem daunting at first, as you get to love and appreciate that cabin itself and what it has to offer, going up and down the driveway feels a lot more familiar and easier than one might think. So much joy and nostalgia have been nurtured here, and we wouldn't trade those moments for the world. We hope that you consider giving this place a chance to experience and create just as many unforgettable memories with your own family as our family did.

Warm regards,

Von & Lisa
