

a note from the seller...

For seventeen years, this house has been the quiet backdrop to our whole life together. We raised our two children within these walls – first steps, first days of school, the ordinary Tuesdays that somehow become the memories you hold onto longest. Some of our favorite nights happened right in front of the fireplace: the kids piled onto the sofa with us, a movie playing, everyone a little too comfortable to move.

We've spent countless evenings in the kitchen, usually with music on and something simmering on the stove, friends and family gathered around while we cooked. And on quieter afternoons, you'd likely find one of us out in the garage, hands busy with a woodworking project, just enjoying the process.

The backyard became its own kind of sanctuary – swimming, hosting, watching the kids play under the trees. It's the kind of space that pulls you outside without even trying.

Leaving for this next adventure isn't easy. This house has given our family so much, and we hope it welcomes you the same way it welcomed us – with light, with warmth, and with room to make your own memories.
